Educational Programmes

Non-governmen- tal Organisation

Interdisciplinary

Transition to Democracy

The Belgrade Open School (BOS) is a non-governmental, not-for-profit educational organisation committed to the dissemination of knowledge and improvement of research in social sciences and humanities.

BOS aims to attract, educate, gather and organise talented university students and other participants from South Eastern Europe in order to network future leaders in various sectors of society.

The School enhances the traditional higher education system by contributing to the re-examination of its basic premises.

BOS offers advanced interdisciplinary undergraduate studies in social sciences and humanities and various profiles of educational programmes, all based on interactive teaching methods.

The goal of the School is to enable its beneficiaries to become autonomous, self-confident and respectable citizens, competent to act with positive distinction to the complexities faced by the transition-process to democracy.

Non scholae, sed vitae discimus!

WHY BOS?

The formal system of education offered by educational institutions cannot meet all the demands and needs for education. This makes conflict inevitable; conflict between the formal system of education and personal needs and wishes which are not taken into account by the system.

The non-formal educational system is to be seen not only as an addition to formal system of education but also as its criticism: the right to rebel against old fashioned and tired school never becomes old, as well as the right to choose one's own way of life. The Belgrade Open School is not an ordinary School although one learns diligently in it. It does not educate narrow-minded specialist who hesitates to think and do anything outside his own field of specialization, but a developed person open to the future of the world.

The fact that the attendants of this School are successful students of different professions proves that the School supersedes formal education for a specific specialization and it requires a developed spiritual man. Therefore we advocate a school that develops critical thinking, not the one that supports memorizing passively: one can memorize a lot, but understand nothing! We do not want our attendants to leave the School as narrow-oriented specialists: the School does not produce specialists but it produces thinkers! We would like our basic working method to be patient and fruitful dialogue, not ex-cathedra lectures: from the culture of speech towards the culture of dialogue! It is the only way that can guarantee that there will be no dogmatists among thinkers, no fanatics among believers, and no tyrants among politicians.

The aim of the School is not to give sheer knowledge to the students, but to develop among them the will for knowledge. The School is not intended to offer instant truths, but to develop love towards truth and life, truth and sense. The ultimate aim of the School is not to impart knowledge to the students but also to teach them how to gain knowledge by their own efforts.

DEPARTMENT FOR ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES

The Department for Advanced Undergraduate Studies (DAUS) organises two one-year academic tracks: the Core Programme and the European Union and the Balkans Programme. The goal of these programmes is to provide supplementary knowledge and skills to talented and outstanding undergraduate university students, in order to create a network of future leaders in various sectors of the society.

The Core Programme

This programme enrolls 35 selected advanced university students.

It is based on multidisciplinary courses, tutorials and skills.

Tutorial work provides the students with individual work with experts over a whole year. The outcome is a final paper, published in the Collection of Students' Essays. Tutorials-much more personalised and developed than those at the state universities aim to improve students' knowledge in a specific academic field and prepare them for future careers. Multidisciplinary courses are tailored for the students of various faculties and for the development of their knowledge and social awareness. Skills development courses, which are not taught in the formal system of education, enable students to utilise education in their future careers.

The European Union and the Balkans Programme

The second academic track enrolls another 35 selected advanced university students.

It is also based on multidisciplinary courses and skills, but focused on one subject area - European studies. The aim of this programme is to educate students on the European Union, its values, institutions, culture, history and standards. The students of the EU and the Balkans Programme can apply for the Core Programme in the following academic year.

Tutors, course coordinators and lecturers of both programmes teach at universities or are research fellows of institutes, as well as distinguished individuals from various sectors of society. Lecturers are initially invited by the course co-ordinators, and their future engagement largely depends upon students' evaluations.

These kinds of programmes do not exist in the formal educational system in Serbia.

CENTER FOR CAPACITY BUILDING

The Centre for Capacity Building, based on unique teaching methods, implements its programmes through weekend seminars, intensive courses and summer and winter schools.

This Centre includes several programmes:

Education for Democracy aims at raising awareness of primarily the young population from the region about the importance of democratisation and developing skills for participation in democratic processes. BOS organises seminars and summer schools for young grass-root level activists of political parties, trade unions, student organisations and NGOs from the former Yugoslavia.

NGO Management includes seminars that the Belgrade Open School periodically organises in order to encourage and support the development of civil society (the third sector) in Serbia and Montenegro.

Team Building programme includes a scope of training sessions on team roles, coordination and communication, conflict management, negotiation decision-making process, etc, all essential for a successfully performing team.

Computer Courses are conducted in the Belgrade Open School Computer Lab. It provides excellent conditions for various computer classes and trainings for students, and others (lecturers, alumni, activists of partner NGOs, participants of seminars held in Belgrade, public administration, etc)

Intensive Courses are occasionally organised. They last up to a week and cover certain social issues. For example, an intensive course on Industrial Relations was conducted for 25 Serbian trade union activists and BOS students in May 2002.

The Centre for Research of Information Technologies (CePIT) was founded in 2001. Its mission is:

- Establishing e-learning programmes aimed at target groups that cannot participate in BOS educational programme,
- Developing research in Informatics, IT, I-Society and Cyber theory,
- Promoting development of I-Society in Serbia.

E-learning. In 2002, CePIT organised two six-week Internet distance-learning courses, "The Basics of Democracy" and "Serbia in Transition". These courses were aimed at two different target groups: high school students and NGO activists from the province of Serbia. Both courses cover civic education topics and promote web-development techniques in educational activities. In the forthcoming year, CePIT will conduct four e-courses, widening the topics, as well as improving e-learning capacities.

Research During 2002, CePIT conducted a study of online behaviour of Internet users in Belgrade. This extensive survey gave important information that will facilitate further socially and politically relevant Internet activities. The results were published in the book Internet Survey: Belgrade 2002. CePIT started an e-journal "Internet Survey Report", which presents the results of CePIT surveys in detail.

Project Citizen is a programme in which BOS implements its experiences in civic education in Serbian state schools. The programme is co-organised by the Center for Civic Education (USA), the Ministry of Education and four educational organisations from Serbia. Currently it is in the pilot phase, being taught to 6th grade pupils in 100 elementary Schools throughout Serbia. BOS' task in this joint effort was the translation, adaptation, publishing and distribution of textbooks for pupils and teacher's guides. The introduction of Project Citizen in 6th grade is just a beginning of a broader action for including education for democratic citizenship (EDC) at all levels of the formal educational system in Serbia.
